PROFILE

Lakita Garth

Lakita Garth is a former Miss Black California and runner up to Miss Black America who doesn't hesitate to tell the world that she is also a virgin. Presently, Lakita is a recording artist and a professional entertainer in Los Angeles. And she has been a principal in various commercials and TV shows such as MTV's Sex in the 90s, Politically Incorrect, Reebok, The Image Awards, The American Television Awards, Nightline, Sally Jesse Raphael, Montel Williams, Life Today, and the 700 Club.

Lakita was also nominated for an Emmy award for The Truth About Sex—a UPN television special she hosted and co-produced. She has also been featured in many major publications including Vogue, Seventeen, Charisma, and Cosmopolitan magazines. In Addition, she has hosted her own controversial radio talk shows in Los Angeles, and she has been featured in many music, documentary, and instructional videos. Lakita has also been a model for Nike Sportswear as well as other catalogs, posters, and magazines.

Lakita Garth is a versed and noted speaker on various issues such as race relations, politics, abortion, and AIDS, and is one of the country's leading abstinence advocates. She has spoken to tens of thousands on the steps of our nation's capital, and she has spoken to over one million teens in assemblies across America. In addition, she has implemented the Athletes for Abstinence Program for the A.C. Green Youth Foundation.

Lakita grew up near a project community in Southern California in which Money Magazine said in the late 80s was one of the worst places in America to raise children. Her mother, a primary school teacher, was left to raise her and four older brothers after their father died of cancer. Their mother was thought to be quite old-fashioned for insisting that her children practice self-control, self-discipline, and the delay of self-gratification. Lakita and her brothers were the laughing stock of the community, but the proof is in the pudding as a result of their mother's strict “old school” upbringing. Of all those who grew up with them in that community, they were the only complete family to make it out. Moreover, their mother raised a doctor, lawyer, engineer, a career naval serviceman, and Lakita finished college in less than four years.

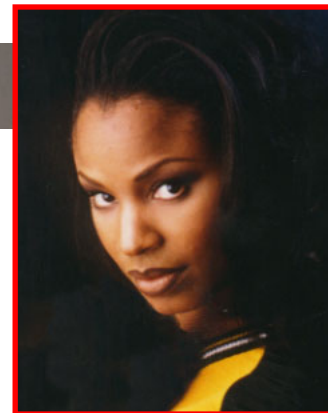

As a motivational speaker, Lakita talks straight to her audiences and addresses issues of the human heart. Her overall message is focused on the positive benefits of living a lifestyle of principle and purpose. She is an activist who utilizes her media platform to spread a positive message to a generation at risk. And her vocal stance has opened up doors for her to testify before the Senate about teen pregnancy prevention.

Lakita says her goal is to give young people the tools that will help them achieve intimate relationships—bringing real empowerment to women and freedom to men so that they can feel like they no longer have to perform. She also points out that she has never had a negative response when delivering her message of chastity and self-respect to young people. And she has been amazed at the type of reception she has received from the many young people who are starving for the message.

One particular incident that touched her deeply occurred after she gave a talk at Chicago's Cook County Detention Center. The juvenile offenders at the center barricaded the exit door and begged her to stay longer. They too were starving for the message of hope.

“If you are not having sex outside of marriage, people think something is wrong with you. People think that you are not attractive. But what men and women are really looking for—especially females—is intimacy.”

“Intimacy is defined as the ability to become completely yourself with another person. You can freely share your hopes, your desires, your dreams, your biggest fears, and your worst failures. And you’re not afraid that the other person is going to laugh at you or talk about you behind your back. They are always going to encourage you to do what is right.”
